IN THE CLAIMS:

Please amend the claims as follows:

Please cancel claims 1-30 without prejudice and substitute therefor the following new claims 31-45.

--31. An Internet billing method for a plurality of customers and a plurality of vendors of products or services for transactions over the Internet between a purchasing customer of the plurality of customers and a selling vendor of the plurality of vendors, wherein, for each purchase transaction between the purchasing customer and the selling vendor, a first amount is charged to the purchasing customer and a second amount is remitted to the selling vendor, the method comprising the steps by a third party to the purchase transaction of:

a) establishing a billing agreement with the purchasing customer to permit the third party to charge the purchasing customer and to remit to a selling vendor for a purchase transaction;

b) establishing a remitting agreement with the selling vendor to permit the third party to charge a purchasing customer and to remit to the selling vendor for a purchase transaction;

c) receiving authorization over the Internet from the purchasing customer to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer without previously receiving a request from the selling vendor to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer;

d) charging the first amount to the purchasing customer in accordance with the billing agreement; and

e) remitting the second amount to the selling vendor in accordance with the remitting agreement.

32. An Internet billing method for a plurality of customers and a plurality of vendors of products or services for transactions over the Internet between a purchasing customer of the plurality of customers and a selling vendor of the plurality of vendors, wherein, for each purchase transaction between the purchasing customer and the selling vendor, a first amount is charged to the purchasing customer and a second amount is remitted to the selling vendor, the method comprising the steps by a third party to the purchase transaction of:

- a) establishing a billing agreement with the purchasing customer to permit the third party to charge the purchasing customer and to remit to a selling vendor for a purchase transaction;
- b) establishing a remitting agreement with the selling vendor to permit the third party to charge a purchasing customer and to remit to the selling vendor for a purchase transaction;
- c) providing a communications link over the Internet between the purchasing customer and the selling vendor to permit the purchasing customer to request information from the selling vendor with respect to a product or service;
- d) receiving authorization over the Internet from the purchasing customer to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer without previously receiving a request from the selling vendor to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer;
- e) charging the first amount to the purchasing customer in accordance with the billing agreement; and
- f) remitting the second amount to the selling vendor in accordance with the remitting agreement.

33. The method according to claim 32, wherein the communications link comprises a communications link through equipment of the third party.

34. The method according to claim 31, wherein no credit card account number of the purchasing customer and no bank account number of the purchasing customer is transmitted over the Internet by the third party to the selling vendor prior to the step of remitting.

35. The method according to claim 32, wherein no credit card account number of the purchasing customer and no bank account number of the purchasing customer is transmitted over the Internet by the third party to the selling vendor prior to the step of remitting.

36. The method according to claim 33, wherein no credit card account number of the purchasing customer and no bank account number of the purchasing customer is transmitted over the Internet by the third party to the selling vendor prior to the step of remitting.

37. The method according to claim 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, or 36, wherein the third party is a cable television company, a company offering financial services, an Internet access provider, or a telephone company.

38. The method according to claim 37, further comprising the step of obtaining approval for charging the first amount from a party other than the purchasing customer and the selling vendor prior to the step of charging.

39. The method according to claim 38, wherein the party other than the purchasing customer and the selling vendor is a bank, a company offering financial services, a credit card company, an Internet access provider, or the third party.

40. The method according to claim 37, wherein the step of charging comprises sending a bill or charging an account with a bank, a cable television company, a company offering financial services, a credit card company, an Internet access provider, a telephone company, or the third party.

41. The method according to claim 37, wherein the step of remitting comprises sending a check or crediting an account with a bank, a cable television company, a company offering financial services, a credit card company, an Internet access provider, a telephone company, or the third party.

42. The method according to claim 37, wherein the second amount is less than the first amount.

43. The method according to claim 37, wherein the step of remitting is performed before the step of charging.

44. An Internet billing method for a plurality of customers and a plurality of vendors of products or services for transactions over the Internet between a purchasing customer of the plurality of customers and a selling vendor of the plurality of vendors, wherein, for each purchase transaction between the purchasing customer and the selling vendor, a first amount is charged to the purchasing customer and a second amount is remitted to the selling vendor, the method comprising the steps by a financial services company of:

a) establishing a billing agreement with the purchasing customer to permit the financial services company to charge the purchasing customer and to remit to a selling vendor for a purchase transaction;

b) establishing a remitting agreement with the selling vendor to permit the financial services company to charge a purchasing customer and to remit to the selling vendor for a purchase transaction;

c) receiving authorization over the Internet from the purchasing customer to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer without previously receiving a request from the selling vendor to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer;

d) charging the first amount to the purchasing customer in accordance with the billing agreement by charging a bank account, a credit card account, or an account with the financial services company; and

e) remitting the second amount to the selling vendor in accordance with the remitting agreement without previously transmitting a credit card account number of the purchasing

customer over the Internet to the selling vendor and without previously transmitting a bank account number of the purchasing customer over the Internet to the selling vendor.

45. An Internet billing method for a plurality of customers and a plurality of vendors of products or services for transactions over the Internet between a purchasing customer of the plurality of customers and a selling vendor of the plurality of vendors, wherein, for each purchase transaction between the purchasing customer and the selling vendor, a first amount is charged to the purchasing customer and a second amount is remitted to the selling vendor, the method comprising the steps by a financial services company of:

a) establishing a billing agreement with the purchasing customer to permit the financial services company to charge the purchasing customer and to remit to a selling vendor for a purchase transaction;

b) establishing a remitting agreement with the selling vendor to permit the financial services company to charge a purchasing customer and to remit to the selling vendor for a purchase transaction;

c) providing a communications link over the Internet through equipment of the financial services company between the purchasing customer and the selling vendor to permit the purchasing customer to request information from the selling vendor with respect to a product or service;

d) receiving authorization over the Internet from the purchasing customer to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer without previously receiving a request from the selling vendor to charge the first amount to the purchasing customer;

e) charging the first amount to the purchasing customer in accordance with the billing agreement by charging a bank account, a credit card account, or an account with the financial services company; and

f) remitting the second amount to the selling vendor in accordance with the remitting agreement without previously transmitting a credit card account number of the purchasing

customer over the Internet to the selling vendor and without previously transmitting a bank account number of the purchasing customer over the Internet to the selling vendor.
